

09 Dec 2016

Zika update: Florida

Latest information on the Zika virus situation in Florida

We are aware of the update made on the Zika virus (ZIKV) situation in Florida. Public Health England and NaTHNaC regularly monitor the transmission of ZIKV in many countries around the world, including the USA, and update our guidance for travellers if appropriate. At the current time, our advice for travellers to affected areas, including pregnant women, remains the same while we are reviewing the situation in Florida.

Further details are available on the Florida Health Website.

Where ZIKV transmission has been reported, information and recommendations for travellers is provided in the 'other risks' section of our Country Information pages, and these will continue to be updated as new information becomes available.

Resources

- Advice for travellers including pregnant women and those planning pregnancy
- General information about Zika virus
- Algorithm – Zika advice for pregnant women, those planning pregnancy and their partners