Good Practice Guidance document: a new resource for travel health practitioners

A Good Practice Guide for all those providing or planning to provide travel health services is published

On Monday 26 October 2020, the Faculty of Travel Medicine, Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons of Glasgow (RCPSG) published a new guidance document for use by the multidisciplinary team, Good Practice Guidance for Providing a Travel Health Service [1]. In addition to defining standards of care essential for the delivery of a travel medicine service, the guidance can be used to help healthcare professionals identify ideas for their professional development, or quality improvement in their travel medicine service.

Key content:

1. Service delivery
2. Operating/ Facility Requirements for a Travel Service
3. Assurance and Governance of Travel Health Services
4. Recommendations for the Practice of Travel Medicine

Other features:

- Competency Assessment Tool for Travel Health Practitioners [downloadable as a separate item and can be edited by the practitioner]
- Training requirements in travel medicine
- Resources for practitioners
- Patient leaflet [downloadable as a separate item]
